Quest recognised as best small company by Sunday Times

Quest Search & Selection has been recognised by the Sunday Times as one of the UK's best 100 small companies to work for in its annual survey, widely acknowledged as the definitive guide to workplace excellence.

With bonuses of £40,000 available to high performing consultants, it is not surprising that employees at the retail recruitment specialist feel they get a fair deal, and the company ranks near the top in this area. Also key to Quest's success is the fact that employees feel supported by management (83%), and feel that their managers show appreciation for a job well done (83%). 81% of employees responded that they truly live the values of Quest.

"We're delighted to be recognised by such a prestigious award and it's a tribute to the commitment and attitude of the fantastic group of people we have here at Quest," said Executive Chairman, Simon Whittington. "They work hard for their clients and for their colleagues and this award reflects their contribution to making Quest the UK's leading retail recruitment agency."

"As a management team, we encourage people to take an entrepreneurial approach to their work and we do everything we can to help them develop their own business as far as their desire, skill and potential allow. The fact that all of our senior management started with the company as retail recruitment consultants is testament to this and is a daily example of the opportunities available to everyone here."

Quest Search & Selection established itself in the 1990s as the UK's leading retail and FMCG recruitment specialist, placing candidates in permanent, temporary and contract roles for retail head offices and in stores for the majority of the UK's leading high street retailers and best known brands. In recent years, Quest has grown into a market leader recruiting across the disciplines of sales & marketing, fashion, property, food manufacturing, purchasing & supply, HR and graduates as well as recruiting internationally for retail brands around the world including Dubai and the UAE. Quest operates throughout the UK via its network of 9 recruitment offices in London, Birmingham, Manchester, Newcastle, Leeds, Glasgow, Bristol, and Dublin.
